

Reporting Types

Assembly

This non-detailed report focuses mainly on major defects. This is typically used for warehouses or commercial buildings.

This can also be used for apartment buildings to identify issues as a whole.

Detailed

This report type will provide the client with detailed data about the buildings structure type, HVAC, and electrical, along with any major defects identified.

Unit by Unit

This report is typically used with apartment complexes. The client will be provided with a report examining the condition of each unit individually.
